About

I started my own way by creating pages with WordPress. From this I began to be interested in web development. At first I only created pages using WordPress, gradually plunging into the intricacies of development. Learned and started applying HTML and CSS.

   In order to master more professional skills, he began to study at the Front-end developer at Redmouse. In the course of training, I wrote many projects at the request I can provide. Engaged in various real projects of varying complexity, I believe in myself and will make every effort to achieve your trust.
